(Respondent) had petitioned to modify Child Support Custody and Visitation. I had originally been awarded sole Custody at our original divorce due to domestic violence incidents. At the trial I presented eleven (11) police reports showing a history of domestic violence and violations of orders of protection between the dates of to the most recent in (5 years after our divorce). He had plead guilty and was sentenced to anger management and probation. I felt confident that pursuant to ARS 25-403.03 would not be given joint custody, with the amount of times he committed the offenses. However, Judge stated that "she did not find a significant amount of abuse" and awarded joint custody from the original sole custody. I would consider this indirect violation of ARS 25-403.03.
